Or is an examination of the security features of the credential sufficient? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A: 63-3A there's an issue that an 'Authoritative Source' must have access to the data at the 'Issuing Source' - this is not practical in many/most cases - so compensating controls are required. • 63-3A says 'published by an issuing source' - technically, for example, a drivers license is 'published' so does that count? 😊 • Walked through Device ID and Reputation case <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • explores what is meant as 'evidence' and how risk-based insights about the person/browser agent could be folded into recognition processes (e.g. device fingerprinting) • Comments: Look into validity to see if they have material for this DG • Comments: taking ongoing relationship with RP into account to elevate IAL over time - e.g. ongoing use of financial services

	AOB	Chair	Terminology discussion <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Joe - email looking at the terminology 'replacement rule' - boils down to comparison between two 'entities' that are actually different - this should be resolved somehow • Terry - https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/qt-idind - a paper on what makes an entity the 'same' entity? • Richard - might be useful to qualify the term 'entity' with adjectives describing what stage of 'proofing-ness' it has attained so far (paraphrased) • Joe - the objective is to compare the information about the applicant to the identity information records held at the authoritative sources to determine if the applicant is the expected entity (paraphrased) • Richard - describe this a 'presented profile' from the applicant versus the 'recorded profile' held at the authoritative source (paraphrased) • This needs more analysis - on the list
